Heaven's Gate recruitment meeting in '94 eerily forshawdowed events

Editor's note: Pine Cone Managing Editor Paul Wolf was shown a videotape of a recruitment session staged in 1994 by the Heaven's Gate cult in The Barnyard Community Room. An official with the shopping center said that, because of limited recordkeeping, The Barnyard has no record of how the meeting was billed or what name the group met under. Because the camera never panned the audience, it is unclear how many people attended the meeting. The following are the observations of the writer.

By PAUL WOLF

IN JUNE 1994, at the mouth of the Carmel Valley, a small audience was attentive but skeptical as adherents of the Heaven's Gate cult made a soft-sell membership drive and spoke cryptically of "higher levels."

PINE CONE EXCLUSIVE

Questions from the audience indicated modest interest in the nature of the group, while a panel of five recruiters spoke of "Luciferian angels," "the Kingdom" and "these physical vessels."

"What do you do when people ask you for proof?" a man asked politely from the audience, in reference to claims that space aliens would soon come to deliver them from the human race.

"When Jesus came around 2,000 years ago, people wanted his credentials, but he didn't have to give them," one man responded.

Carmel Little League's Forefathers

'97 Opening Day ceremonies will honor Carmelites who got it going

By JERRY STEWART

IN 1957, A group of friends including Bill Woolsey, Ralph Thompson, Jr. and Jack Miller began to collaborate on a shared vision.

They each had kids who wanted to play Little League baseball, yet at the time no organized league existed in Carmel.

Their idea was to pool together all of their resources and create a league of Bill Woolsey, Jack Miller and Ralph Thompson, Jr. were key players in the group effort that made Carmel Little League a reality 40 years ago. Now called Carmel Youth Baseball, the league, at its Opening Day Ceremonies on Saturday, April 12, will honor those individuals who made it all happen in 1957.

their own.

Forty years later, that league, now known as Carmel Youth Baseball, is celebrating another birthday, with this year's opening day ceremonies slated for Saturday, April 12 at Larson Field.

"Getting the league started was a group effort," said Miller, who sponsored the league's first team, San Carlos Agency. "All of the other local cities had leagues, and we wanted one for the kids in Carmel."

According to Miller and Woolsey, the league's first president, the biggest challenge facing the fledgling league was finding and building a playing field.

"In 1956, the space next to Carmel Mission was just an artichoke field," said Woolsey, who also was Carmel's assistant postmaster for 14 years. "So I went to Monsignor Michael O'Connell and asked him if we could use the space, and the bishop gave his OK."

Such a deal!

Since that day, the space at Larson Field has been leased to the league by the Mission for only $1 a year.

Woolsey said the next hurdle was building the field, which required weeks of volunteer work and financial help from citizens.

"One of our biggest problems was getting money to build the field," said Woolsey, 82, who still occasionally attends games. "Different people from the league's board of directors would ask friends and acquaintances for donations."

Miller, a contractor at the time, supervised the construction of the snack bar and equipment storage building, which are still used today.

"Where the field is now is very close to how it was in the old days," said Miller.

Today there are three fields at Larson Field.

According to Thompson, who served as league secretary, funding and field preparation were continual problems.

"Woolsey was undyingly loyal, but everyone pitched in," said Thompson, a Monterey attorney and longtime resident of Carmel. "It was a day-to-day operation."

At the time, team sponsors were responsible for providing everything from uniforms to equipment.

"Kids back then were not charged a fee," said Miller. "Shortfalls were made up by passing the hat between innings of every game. In the old days, it was tough to get a sponsor, but today there's no

Recent past shows the issue has been oddly controversial

By TAMARA GRIPPI

A SEVEN-member group soon will be convened to determine how much art work Carmel wants to grace its streets and how to catalog its existing artistic assets.

The deceptively simple subject has been the center of controversy in recent years, as city officials and residents have clashed about how much art is desirable and what are the best means of selecting pieces.

The Community and Cultural Commission spent nearly a year putting together an extensive policy on public art, and the Carmel City Council approved the formation of the Committee for Art in Public Places (CAPP).

The group, as yet unselected, will include artists, art educators and art scholars to handle the selection and purchase of pieces for display.

The new 10-page policy details the standards for CAPP to use when considering art for display. Issues of note include:

■ Inclusion of local artists.

■ Compatibility with the historic and aesthetic character of the village.

■ Representation of a broad variety of artistic disciplines.

"Because of the process, everyone got input," said Brian Donoghue, director of the community and cultural commission. "It had to reflect a lot of different attitudes about art and art in public."

Cultural commissioners feel confident about art professionals making the decisions about art in public.

"It's good to have a group that has knowledge of art and is somewhat insulated from politics," said Linda Anderson of the Community and Cultural Commission.

The committee's detachment from politics should prove to be useful in the future if the city considers works like "The Valentine," the lifesize sculpture now sitting in First Murphy Park at Lincoln and Sixth.

Heated past

The council's consideration of that piece sparked heated debate over what constitutes good art — proof that it is in the eye of the beholder. Some thought the

Ambulance service talks stalled, but local service proven to still be a boon

By PAUL WOLF

THE CITY of Carmel is subsidizing the Carmel area ambulance provider to a tune of $130,000 a year, and it will continue to do so unless the city can reach an agreement with the County of Monterey.

Talks between the city and county, however, are at a standstill, according to Pine Cone sources.

"There is nothing new to report," Carmel City Administrator Jere Kersnar said.

Pen Med's role

In order for the Carmel Regional Fire Ambulance (CRFA) to become self-sustaining financially, the county would have to allow its ambulance provider, Peninsula Medics, to turn over the Cypress Fire Protection District territory, located just outside Carmel, to the city's provider.

With that territory, the CRFA would derive a large enough increase in its customer base to obviate the need for a subsidy. CRFA used to operate in that territory before the county consolidation occurred — without Carmel's participation — in 1995.

'Still stalled'

"Talks are still stalled," said Monterey County Supervisor Dave Potter.

The CRFA serves Carmel, Mid Valley, Carmel Valley, Carmel Highlands and Cachagua. By breaking off from the county two years ago, the city ensured that an ambulance would be kept at the Carmel Fire Station (Sixth and Mission) at all times.

Despite the lack of progress on talks with the county, Carmel Mayor Ken White said residents should count their blessings. "We've got our own ambulance in town and it's a great service," White said.

NECNA to target ambulance service at Monday meeting

THE REGULAR meeting of the Northeast Carmel Neighbors Association Monday will focus on the status of ambulance service in Carmel.

The meeting, which begins at 4:30 p.m., will be held at the Vista Lobos meeting room at Third and Torres. It is open to the public.

Mayor Ken White and City Administrator Jere Kersnar will be among the guests.

"In any instance of choking, cardiac arrest, the difference two or three minutes can make is huge," said Carmel Fire Chief Bill Hill.

As recently as late last year, the speedy revival of a heart attack victim by paramedics in downtown Carmel proved that a one-minute response time was preferable to whatever the county system might have managed, according to David Jedinak, an emergency medical technician with CRFA, stationed in Carmel.

While the man survived the incident, it is uncertain what would have been his fate without the local ambulance presence, said Jedinak, who is also a local volunteer fireman.

Councilman 'optimistic'

A negotiator for Carmel and the other CRFA jurisdictions, Councilman Bob Fischer, said he is "optimistic" negotiations will ultimately be successful.

The city has already prevailed over the county in a court decision, which permits Carmel area jurisdictions to run their own ambulance service. That matter, however, has been appealed by the county.

Who called the sheriffs to site of the suicides?

OF all the questions raised by the horrendous tragedy last week in Rancho Santa Fe where 39 members of a cult died in a mass suicide in a mansion there, one of the most intriguing is — who was the anonymous caller that tipped the sheriffs to check the mansion?

Well, wouldn't you know, Carmel Valley's Jill Margaret Brown has the answer. And this is it: "YOU knew that 'Do,' the first note of the musical scale, was the leader of the group, right?" J.M.B. began.

"OK," she continued, "what you DIDN'T know was that he had an assistant named 'Re,' the second note of the musical scale, who was second in command of the 40-member cult."

"WAIT a minute," I interrupted, "what do you mean '40-member cult?' There were only 39."

She ignored the interruption and went on: "Re was from someplace in Central America," she said, "and his real name was Pollo Cacciatore."

"ANYWAY, when Do and Re were directing the suicide ritual, it finally come down to where those two were the only ones left alive."

"At this point, Do said to Re: 'It is most gratifying that all of our members are true believers, and now you and I will join the others on our journey to a far better kingdom, my faithful friend.'

"'RIGHT,' said Re, 'but you go ahead and start without me because I want to let the cat out, turn off the lights, turn the thermostat down, and put the phone on call forwarding — we don't want to waste money, you know.'

"'You are, indeed, a wonderful servant of the cause,' said Do, already consuming his applesauce / phenobarbital / vodka potion and beginning to nod off."

"IN a few minutes, Re tiptoed out the front door, closed it softly, then walked down the driveway and hailed a cab which took him to a McDonald's where he used the phone to call sheriffs!"

I was stunned to silence, but J.M.B. had one more thing to add:

"DID you know that 'Pollo' means 'chicken' in Spanish?"

Clunk.

Somehow, I doubt that J.M.B.'s tale will be picked up for Paul Harvey's "The rest of the story ..."

TODAY'S QUOTE . . . Sharon Stone:

"My life is actually a lot like 'Valley of the Dolls,' except that I have better clothes and hairdos."

THE RATINGS GAME . . . A gentleman named Jackson David Lowell said in 1896:

"The trouble with throwing down a gauntlet is that your intended opponent may not notice. Then you have to suffer the indignity of picking it up and throwing it down again, only louder."

"If that fails, too, you are well advised to pick up your gauntlet and go home."

NONE of that has anything to do with the Nielsen ratings of local television stations' news programs, of course, but it may point up the frustration of challenging the area's perennial ratings gorilla — KSBW!

KION (formerly KCCN) is making a huge, costly effort to close in on KSBW, but after the February ratings results, the exasperating question remains:

DOES KSBW even notice?

Judging from the February numbers, the answer is — probably not. For KSBW even STRETCHED its huge lead beyond its customary rout!

BUT remember this — KION's big effort has only barely begun, and as John Heywood said back there in the 16th century:

"Rome was not built in one day."

BEFORE nausea from those great quotes renders you hors de combat (or has that ship already sailed?), let's just cut to the numbers:

Carmel Valley: Several bursts of rapid fire were reported in a northern canyon. A deputy, who did not find any suspects, thought the suspects were practicing shooting with an illegal firearm.

Carmel: A woman reported that her husband, 44, was missing. She was concerned because he is clinically depressed. Deputies found him unconscious in his vehicle south of Carmel Valley on Highway 1. He apparently overdosed on several anti-depressant pills in an attempt to take his life. The man was taken by ambulance to Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula for treatment.

Carmel: A woman reported losing her purse when she returned to her vehicle, which was parked on Highway 1 just south of Ocean Avenue.

Pebble Beach: A man called to report hearing noises at the rear of his house in Wildcat Canyon. An area check was done and the noises appeared to be coming from raccoons under her house.

SUNDAY, MARCH 23

Carmel: A woman reported that her house, which was under construction, had been burglarized. It was discovered that several appliances and tools were taken from the home and garage. Approximate value of the heist was $10,000. No suspects at this time.

Big Sur: Nine individuals were given citations for trespassing on El Sur Ranch.

Carmel Valley: A woman reported an individual, possibly a transient, was looking through her window. The subject left after woman yelled she would be calling the sheriff's department. An area check resulted in no perpetrator being found.

MONDAY, MARCH 24

Big Sur: A woman reported a man, 36, sitting in his car on Coast Road for more than five hours. She stated that he "did not look right." Deputies contacted the man and confirmed that he was OK and was living out of his vehicle.

Pebble Beach: Two men, 19 and 20, were spotted running on a golf course. When stopped, suspects said they were playing "right golf." Pebble Beach security escorted them off the property.

Carmel Valley: A 44-year-old woman

Scaled-down arts festival gets 3-2 city council OK

By PAUL WOLF

DESPITE A rocky start, the Carmel Performing Arts Festival is ready to take flight this October as the Carmel City Council Tuesday approved a one-year trial run of the 20-day event.

With council members and many residents concerned about problems associated with noise, traffic and crowds, the event's executive director presented major safeguards and modifications to an earlier plan.

The measures taken include:

- Permitting only 15 actual performing days and far fewer events.
- Forbidding public performances on Carmel streets and greenbelts, with the possible exception of Devendorf Park.
- Forbidding street closures, banners and decorated storefronts.
- Forbidding the sale of crafts as part of the event.
- Blocking no existing parking spaces.

Post-event review to examine impacts, benefits

"There will be no Mardi Gras-type parties in Carmel," McKee told the council, noting that the planned event has endured from negative public relations since its unveiling weeks ago.

Well-heeled and well-mannered

Stephen Moorer, artistic director of the Pacific Repertory Theatre and a member of the Carmel Performing Arts Festival board, used the most vivid language he could find to explain that the event would attract the well-heeled and the well-mannered.

"We are not trying to draw a new crowd of hippies and head-bangers and rock 'n' rollers," he said, citing "fear-mongering in the press."

Moorer noted that the festival's emphasis on weekday and evening events complements but does not add to, the heavy daytime foot traffic. Meanwhile, venues like the Golden Bough, the Outdoor Forest Theater and Sunset Center tend already to be booked on the weekend.

McKee did say the event would include some out-of-the-area headliner acts, but most of the performances would be derived from well-known Peninsula and county organizations.

The council's 3-2 action (with Paula Hazdovac and Barbara Livingston dissenting) served as a kind of informal endorsement for the first year of the event.

As it happened, event organizers did not need council approval to coordinate and organize local and regional performing arts under one figurative banner.

Once Carmel Police Chief Don Fuselier deemed the revised, less ambitious plan not to be a traffic or safety problem, the event was set to go.

"This is a greatly reduced agenda that I am comfortable with," Fuselier told the council.

The council's vote technically was a decision to receive the city staff's report on the festival and the modifications. However, council members included in their action a request to receive a report after the Oct. 4-26 event from city staff officials on the impacts of the event.

It so happens that a Monterey resident — we'll call her Sondra — decided to join a friend and attend the meeting, held at the Community Room of The Barnyard in Carmel.

In hindsight, it would be easy to recognize the foreshadowing of later events.

Just for laughs, Sondra, now a film student, videotaped the session. "When I left, I had a feeling of dread, so I decided I would keep the tape," she said.

Sondra describes her male friend as more of a seeker than herself. "He was always looking for something to connect with," she said. "He was about to run off and join them, but I told him that was nuts."

Sondra described herself as an "atheist" and a "skeptic."

Sondra said it may be significant that she remembers only one person walking out during the dreary-dull two-hour session.

The cult's leader, Marshall Herff Applewhite, A.K.A. Do, A.K.A. Bo, did not grace the room with his presence. However, there were frequent references to him, as well as to the late Ti, A.K.A. Bonnie Lu Trusdale Nettles, the cult's matriarch.

At least two of the five recruiters — one man and one woman — are immediately recognizable as being among the 39 people who committed suicide in the group's rented mansion in Rancho Santa Fe last week. (The April 7 issue of Time magazine has a nearly com-

Despite the reductions to the event, there were still plenty of detractors Tuesday, including Hazdovac and Livingston, who remained unequivocally opposed to the event.

"Residents are used to having a little breathing room between the end of summer and the Christmas season," Livingston said. "I just feel that enough is enough."

Hazdovac said she has received many phone calls, all of them critical of the festival.

A measure of support

Councilman Bob Fischer urged his council colleagues to live up to the expectations of a cultural community. "Are we so old and befuddled that we can't make room for the young artists who want to entertain us?" Fischer asked.

Carmel Mayor Ken White, who said he received mixed sentiments over the telephone, suggested that a city's support for the arts had to be an active, ongoing process. He noted the significance of the disappearance of movie houses in Carmel.

"They disappeared because we as residents didn't support them," he said.

There appeared to be two opposing points of view. One held that October was a quiet month that should stay that way in the interests of the village's residential character. The other view held that October was a quiet month that made a perfect "shoulder season" between other well-known events and the busier tourist seasons.

ART: Committee formed

piece, depicting a couple clearly displaying affection, was a touching tribute to human closeness; others regarded the work as cheaply sentimental and unbefitting Carmel.

The council decided against buying the statue, but a community group raised the money to purchase it.

City leaders hope that the new committee of arts people will have an easier time building consensus and passing on recommendations to the council.

The creation of the new committee and art policy doesn't necessarily mean more money for art projects.

Although the Community and Cultural commission put in a budget request this year for CAPP's evaluation and maintenance of art, this will not be an ongoing request.

The city will set up an Art in Public Places Program Fund, a special reserve account for CAPP's work, but the funding will depend mostly upon contributions and grants.

In fact the only money now freed up for purchasing art is a $16,000 fund that the cultural department received from a private citizen that is specified for art to be displayed at Sunset Center.

CAPP will primarily be dealing with the city's current collection, making decisions about which pieces should be displayed and managing a system of rotating paintings hung in public buildings.

The committee will also tackle the daunting task of setting up a procedure for cataloging and maintaining the city's art collection, which consists mostly of donated paintings. "We need a really good system of cataloging the art," said Anderson.

The city currently has art displayed at City Hall, Sunset Center and the library.

While the committee is not charged with soliciting donations, the creation of an art policy may be viewed as a positive sign to potential contributors.

"Artists, collectors and donors feel more confident about donating to a municipality that has a system in place," said Donoghue.

Applications to serve on the CAPP may be obtained at Sunset Center Administration, located on the east side of San Carlos between 8th and 9th Avenues, weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5 p.m. The application deadline is Wednesday, April 30, 1997.

Carmel Little League's first championship team in '57

Jack Miller was not only a founder of Carmel Little League, but he also managed San Carlos Agency — a team he also sponsored — to the first-ever title. Here's a look at the players who made up that 1957 championship team. Back row, left to right: Paul O'Neil, Bobby Moffatt, Chuck Casey, Padgett Decker, Lindy Mahrt, Tim Hudson and John Aiken. (The batboy between Hudson and Aiken could not be identified.) Front row, left to right: Pete Conway, Jay Miller, Mac Little, Ron Bennett, Danny Holman, Dicky Hubbell and Bill Haupt. Miller described Holman, who went on to star in football at Carmel High School and San Jose State University, as the best player he ever coached.

problem."

Miller, who has been involved with the program since its inception, said today's league, which began the '97 season on March 25, is far better than its predecessor.

"Teams and managers work much harder today at practice," said Miller. "The coaches, managers and umpires are far superior today. Back then, if we needed umpires we'd call a local bar, the El Fumidor, and a ball-and-strike man would be on the field in minutes."

Over the years, the league has produced many fine athletes, including the late Danny Holman, who is a member of the Monterey Peninsula College Hall of Fame and was an All-American quarterback at San Jose State.

"Danny Holman was the best player I've ever seen," said Miller, who had the pleasure of coaching Holman on the league's first championship team in 1957.

Joe Newman, current chairperson of Carmel Youth Baseball's alumni committee, said the league owes a debt of gratitude to its pioneers.

"These are the guys who originated the idea and formalized the deal with the Mission," said Newman. "It's been 40 years of benefit for local kids."

The April 12 Opening Day ceremonies, which will include a tribute to the league's forefathers, will begin at noon.

Enjoy full Life Care retirement living in Pacific Grove.

Retirement living hasn't slowed down Don and Irene Slaiter. Both say they're as active today as they were during their careers. As volunteer docents for Bay Net, they support their love of marine life on the Monterey Peninsula and share their knowledge with others at Coast Guard Pier and Lover's Point near their home at Canterbury Woods.

Don and Irene also find the time and energy to be certified American Red Cross volunteers, ready to accept a call for help anytime they're needed.

Don and Irene enjoy good food and friends in the gracious and open dining room at Canterbury Woods.

When not volunteering, Don takes golf lessons and enjoys line dancing with Irene and other Canterbury Woods residents.

"We're so lucky," says Irene, "and so happy to be living here in comfort with so many other active and interesting people. We feel secure in knowing that at our home at Canterbury Woods we're guaranteed comprehensive lifetime medical care."

The Golden Years

From now on, people who are eligible for Social Security benefits or other Federal entitlements will not receive checks. Instead, payments will be made electronically into the beneficiary's bank account. It costs the government 25 cents to process a check. By eliminating checks the government will save $100 million a year. Social Security retirees who have been receiving checks can continue to get them by mail. But any who want to help balance the U.S. budget and enjoy the convenience of electronic delivery can call 1-800-772-1213 to change to direct deposit.

Rosie Gries has rung doorbells and sold Avon cosmetics since 1938. Others may have been at it longer, but none can challenge her as the oldest. She still continues to travel her route in central North Dakota after her 100th birthday. Because her vision was not as good as it used to be, she hired a driver so that she could call on her 25 customers twice a month. Ms. Gries promised she would go on "as long as I can walk." Even after 100? "I don't feel my age," she replied.

Garth Jeffers, son of Robinson Jeffers, appeared with his wife, Brenda, at a lecture on the poet's work. Lecturer Cecil Wahle greets them, as librarian Arlene Hess looks on.

JEFFERS: Examining poet's themes

the recurring themes in all his work.

"It was surprising to find that he had ever chosen to explain himself at all to anyone," Wahle said of Jeffers' lecture.

In fact, the first time Jeffers read his poetry aloud to anyone was at the public reading at the Library of Congress.

Jeffers was an introvert, ruminating and internalizing everything, Wahle explained.

His themes are reflective of a person approaching large human issues including death, war and spiritual conflict.

One of Jeffers' great themes, "Culture Ages," addresses the rise and fall of civilizations.

"In Jeffers' mind, what distinguishes this 'culture age' from others is that we are in conflict. We believe in loving our enemies and meeting force with force," said Wahle.

Amidst Jeffers' weighty contemplations, a theme that came to him with relief was the landscape of the Monterey coastline, according to Wahle. Jeffers believed that the landscape was "the place for no story."

'No story'

"These lines are called the place for no story because the coast here, in its pure and simple grandeur, seem to be too beautiful to be the scene of any narrative of mine," Jeffers had explained in his lecture.

Wahle shared with the group Jeffers' ideas about great poetry. "Great poetry gathers and expresses the whole of things as prose never can."

At the end of the lecture, Wahle announced that Jeffers has been nominated for a plaque at Poet's Corner at the cathedral of St John the Divine in New York City.

Mayor not sold on parking garage at Sunset Center, eyes alternatives

By TAMARA GRIPPI

SPEAKING BEFORE a gathering of the Carmel Residents Association, Mayor Ken White questioned the conventional wisdom that the city's parking problem would best be addressed with a Sunset Center parking garage.

While one proposal, still in the talking stages, would put a parking garage at the city's north lot at Sunset Center, White told the CRA audience at a "State of the Village" meeting March 20 that he is not sold on the idea.

The parking structure has been envisioned as a component of the overall Sunset Center Theater renovation, a $12.9 million project now in the planning stage. Funding for such a parking facility — $5 million or so — has not been identified. But the Sunset redevelopment and the parking improvements are often considered linked.

"We need to look at what we can do now with the existing spaces," White explained.

White proposed the idea of moving the bungalows at the north end of the center to make room for new spaces.

In any event, White said the parking shortage needs to be addressed by a comprehensive plan.

On other topics, White:

■ Vowed to ensure that all segments of the community would be a part of the effort to revise beach regulations.

It was White who convened a Beach Master Plan Task Force, chaired by former mayor Jean Grace, to study the existing rules for such subjects as curfews, campfires, toilet facilities, dogs on the beach, noise and beach cleaning.

The mayor said that the master plan should be included as part of the city's local coastal plan, which has yet to be finalized and certified.

■ Assured residents that Carmel will

Hogan's Alley

When in doubt, don't delay — buy that driver

RECENTLY I picked up a new Taylor Made Burner Bubble with the TS- 100 shaft, waggled it for a couple seconds in the pro shop, and made the expert diagnosis that it would be longer and straighter than my Big Bertha. So I bought it.

Like most golfers, I'm one of those dummies who spends $450 on a new driver rather than allocating the equivalent amount on private lessons. Of course it won't work, and lessons are always the better alternative, but I did it anyway.

So you're a dummy too, eh? Ever wonder which local golf shop has the lowest prices?

I did too, so I made a shopping list of some trendy new equipment and priced the various golf shops on the Monterey Peninsula.

On my shopping list were some name brand-specific model equipment including waterproof shoes, a carry bag with stand, irons similar to Greg Norman's, oversized titanium woods, a dozen balata golf balls, a specific glove and that wedge from Mars that supposedly makes bunkers obsolete.

Some assumptions did hold true. For instance, equipment at Pebble Beach Golf Links costs more than at Nevada Bob's. (Prices at private country clubs were not included in this survey because you have to be a member to shop there anyway).

Surprising results

Who had the lowest prices? The findings may surprise you.

Rancho Canada GC in Carmel Valley was the lowest with an overall price of $1967 for the set of items. This is surprising because typically "green grass" shops charge more than "off course" shops. Pro Golf Discount was second at $2008, Nevada Bob's third at $2039 and Del Rey Oaks Driving Range fourth at $2062.

Pacific Grove Muni came in fifth at $2308, Poppy Hills sixth at $2353, with Spyglass, Old Del Monte, Spanish Bay and Pebble Beach ranging from $2448 to $2702.

However, an important caveat comes into play if you are a NCGA member, because members are entitled to a 20 percent discount at Poppy Hills Golf Course. With the discount, Poppy Hills' net price was only $1882, lowest of the bunch.

Ironically, the shops with the highest equipment prices also do the most overall shop volume. That's because for some shops like Pebble Beach, equipment is not the main source of business. Rather, logoed apparel is the top seller.

The moral of this story? Either spend your money on lessons or take advantage of your NCGA membership. It'll probably save you cash in the long run.

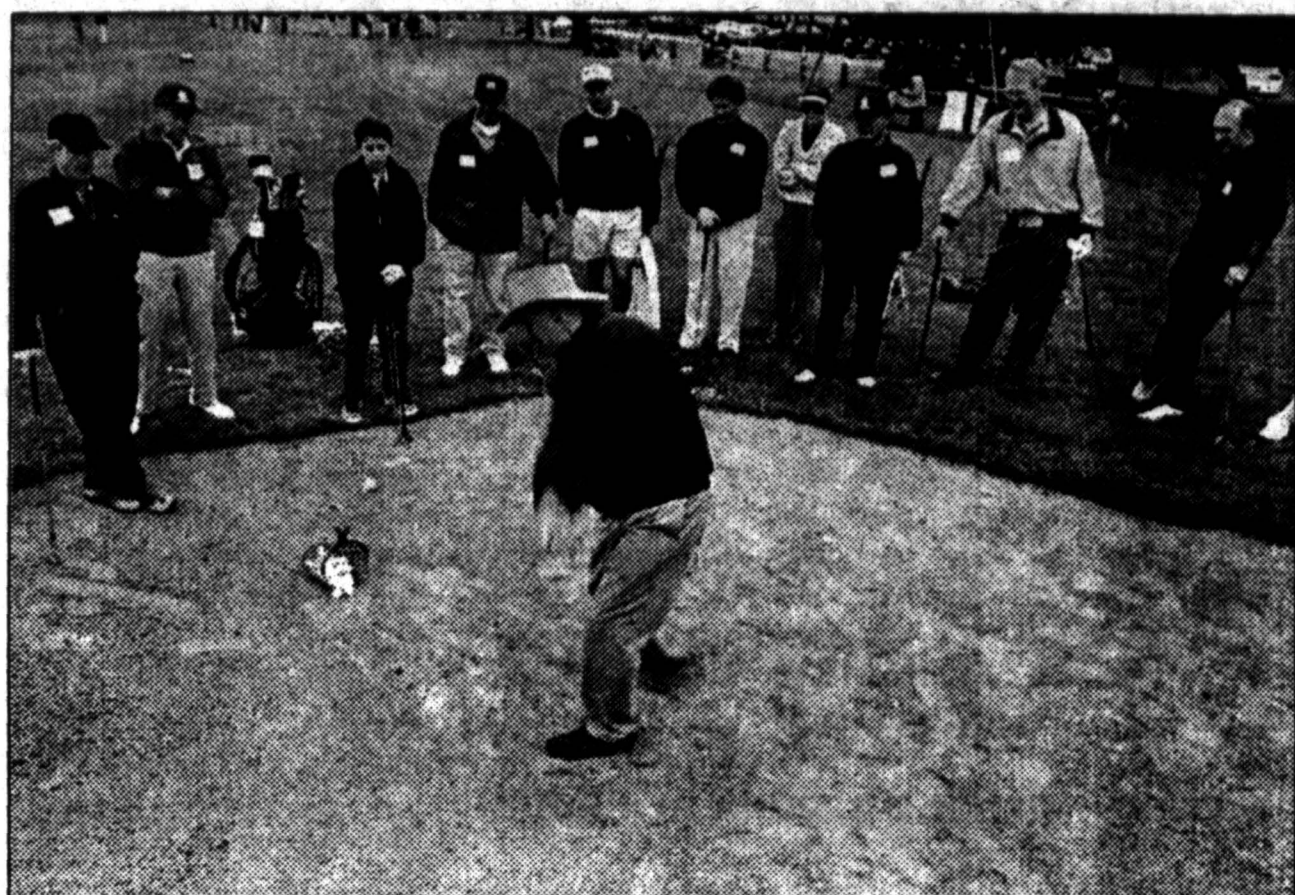

Chip Shots: The Ken Wheatley Memorial Golf Tournament is Wednesday at Old Del Monte. The tournament's focus is raising educational funds for the young child of the former Pebble Beach caddie, who was killed in a car accident. Entry fee is $125. Cardenas, Shepner, Stream shine for CHS in Las Vegas tournament

Frosh hurler comes up big, too

By SCOTT A. BROWN

PATRONS OF the Las Vegas nightlife were treated to a sight normally unseen in the Nevada desert — a group of Padres cruising the Sunset Strip.

By day, however, those same Padres (the Carmel High varsity baseball team version) endeavored to right their season in the four-day Bishop Gorman Invitational Tournament.

The Padres' entrance in the tournament was predicated on their having won the Central Coast Section title in their division last year. Largely due to erratic pitching, however, Carmel was off to a disappointing 4-6 start in 1997 despite returning all but three of its players from last year's team.

The Padres made small strides toward rectifying that record by winning two games and losing two in a field that included some of the best prep baseball squads in the western United States.

Breaking it open

Carmel hung tight with a very strong Los Angeles Poly team in the tournament's opening round Thursday, March 27 before surrendering five runs in the fifth inning and four

Carmel High-PG alumni baseball game slated for April 26 at CHS

A BASEBALL GAME between alumni from Carmel and Pacific Grove high schools will be held Saturday, April 26 in an event that will raise funds to benefit the two programs.

The event will begin at 10 a.m. and will be held at Carmel High.

The game will reenact the longstanding baseball rivalry that has been waged between the two schools within the Mission Trail Athletic League for the better part of the last three decades. Of the past 16 MTAL baseball titles, 14 have been won by either Carmel or Pacific Grove.

Nicole Romero's bat, arm propels RLS to 11-2 softball triumph over Carmel

By SCOTT A. BROWN

FOUR ERRORS by host Carmel High School's girls' varsity softball team opened some doors for visiting Robert Louis Stevenson last Thursday. Fifteen bases on balls quite literally helped the Pirates walk through those doors, en route to an 11-2 victory over the Padres.

Both teams came into the contest with two victories while struggling through disappointing early seasons. Freshman sensation Nicole Romero, sensing her club's need for a Mission Trail Athletic League victory, went the distance for the Pirates and recorded the win. She also contributed three hits in as many at bats and a run batted in.

The victory came on the heels of two losses earlier in the week for Stevenson, which is now 3-5. Carmel is 2-9.

Behind the efficient early baserunning of senior co-captains Erin Miller and Lisa Kroopf, who stole a combined four bases in four attempts, Stevenson posted the entirety of its scoring in the first four innings.

Zena Hermann contributed two hits on the day, including a double, and an RBI. Lindsey Butler was Romero's battery-mate and contributed two hits and two RBI.

Breaker rides high

Stevenson had been felled the day before 6-1 by one-person buzzsaw Gen Garcia. Garcia, a Pacific Grove High senior, threw a five-hitter for the Breakers while contributing a triple, a single, three RBI, a stolen base and a run scored. First baseman Casey Hutchins had a triple and the lone RBI for Stevenson.

In a contest held last Tuesday, Stevenson lost to Santa Catalina 3-2 despite another outstanding performance by Romero, who allowed only two hits while striking out four.

Freshman Gonzales guides CHS to swim win over Monterey

By TREVOR FOGG
Pine Cone Sports Correspondent

THE CARMEL High School boys' swimming and diving team is off, as the growing squad takes to the water for the '97 season.

Coming off a 6-2 season last year (the Padres finished in third place in the Monterey Bay League, just two points behind Hollister), this year's young team has high hopes.

Carmel's swimming and diving team has been moved from the MBL to the Mission Trail Athletic League. The Padres will benefit from having left powerhouses Hollister and Live Oak behind in the old league.

Second-year varsity coach Konrad Kohrs played down the Padres' chances for a league title, saying "(Robert Louis) Stevenson should be our toughest competition this year. It doesn't matter whether the league is weaker this year, we still must always perform like champions and that is what we are working toward."

Freshman standout Craig Gonzales will lead CHS. In Carmel's only meet thus far this season, a 96-92 non-league win over crosstown rival Monterey last Friday, Gonzales took first with Central Coast Section qualifying times in the 200-yard individual medley and the 100-yard backstroke.

SON GETS BEST OF DAD

PG pitcher gets key hits, save in victory over RLS

By SCOTT A. BROWN

AS LOSSES go, Robert Louis Stevenson's most recent will more than likely represent one of the least painful in manager Paul Wilcox's career. After all, the RLS varsity baseball skipper had the best seat in the house for one of parenthood's more enjoyable rights of passage — watching his son, Nick, star in an athletic forum in which he is greatly gifted.

Unfortunately for the elder Wilcox, the 7-5 Pacific Grove victory to which Nick led his team was at the hands of his father's Stevenson club and dropped the Pirates' record in the Mission Trail Athletic League to 1-1.

Nick, the Breakers' first baseman/pitcher, went 3 for 4 with two doubles and pitched the final three innings for the save as his team improved to 2-0 in the MTAL.

Error-plagued effort

Paul Wilcox's team did more than the coach would have liked to contribute to the Pacific Grove win, however, committing five errors in the first three innings which led to the Breakers' first six runs.

Joey Baker was on the mound the entire game for the Pirates. After hurling a comto steal against him in the tournament. Freshman pitcher Jesse Kovacs, making his first varsity pitching appearance, gave Carmel a much-needed shot in the arm Friday against Basic High of Henderson, Nev. In leading the Padres to an 8-2 win, Kovacs allowed two runs and five hits, struck out four and walked two in six innings. Cardenas slammed a homer for the Padres, and Stream went 2 for 4.

Shepner breaks out

Saturday was Robbie Shepner Day for the Padres. In the team's 17-8 loss to Hillcrest High of Salt Lake City, Shepner was 4 for 4 with a two-run homer. Ryan Bailey also hit a two-run homer, while JoJo Grewell tripled and singled for Carmel.

CHS, however, continued its pattern of not throwing strikes, walking 14 and hitting four batsmen.

Second baseman Shepner then went 3 for 3 with a grand slam in Carmel's 14-7 nightcap win over Bonita Vista High of San Diego, which entered the game undefeated. Carmel rallied from a 7-2 deficit in the third inning to overtake Bonita Vista, which won its division of the tournament with a 3-1 record.

Cardenas also was 3 for 3 with a triple and two doubles. Pitchers Tony Cain and Trevor Fogg combined for the victory.

"We saw glimpses of what we can be in that last game," said Carmel Head Coach Mike Kelly. "But we can't win a thing if we don't throw strikes. We won't be competitive if we don't."

Carmel, now 6-8, next plays Wednesday at Palma. First pitch is scheduled for 4 p.m.

SWIMMING

Beyond Gonzales, however, said Kohrs, the team will win not because of superior talent, but because of depth. The Padres did not win many events against the Toreadores, but managed to tally many second, third and fourth place finishes.

Junior sprinter Elliot Byrd picked up second place in both his events, posting a 55.3 seconds in the 100-yard freestyle and a 24.1 seconds in the 50-yard freestyle — .8 second off the CCS qualifying time.

The team's goal is to place all three relay teams in the CCS playoffs. At the Monterey meet, the 200 and 400 yard relays recorded times of 1:42 and 3:42 flat, both three seconds shy of the CCS qualifying time. The 200-yard medley relay finished in 1:52.5, just .1 second off the CCS time.

The Carmel diving looks to be dominant this year. Their five divers — Matt Borek, Millan Diaz-Aguado, Sasha Vorobiov, Luke Pritchett and Brian Mahoney — have the potential to take five of the six spots in the CCS playoffs.

Against Monterey, Borek and Mahoney finished first and second, while Pritchett took fourth. Borek and Diaz-Aguado are both returning from CCS finishes in the top eight last season and will provide veteran leadership to other rookie divers. Mike Massey will coach the talented diving squad.

The Padres will next compete at 3:30 p.m. Friday, April 18 against Pacific Grove in the CHS pool.

League championships will be held May 9-10, with the CCS postseason meet slated for the following weekend. Both will be held at sites yet to be determined.

SOFTBALL: Gaudoin mows down Gonzales

Butler again played the whole game at catcher and contributed three hits. Kroopf knocked in two RBI.

Gonzales routed

The news had been better for the Padres earlier in the week. In advance of facing rival Stevenson, the Padres knocked off MTAL competitor Gonzales 15-1 Wednesday. Michelle Gaudoin pitched a two-hitter and struck out five as Carmel garnered its second league victory.

Sadie Thomas, Alyssa Garnero, Alicia Pearson and Marlo Milligan each had two hits for the Padres, while Shannon Dougherty and Page Peterson made spectacular running catches in the outfield. Taking advantage of 10 Spartan turnovers, Carmel managed a score in each of the game's seven innings.

Stevenson next plays Wednesday at home against King City. Carmel next travels to Notre Dame the same afternoon. Both games begin at 4 p.m.

In Jones' defense

Dear Editor:

I am a longtime soccer fan, formerly a player and a coach.

I have two different satellites so that I can watch all the great games from Europe. I have to tell you that some of the best games I have seen this year actually took place in your own back yard, without your noticing. It is interesting that when you finally do spend some energy on soccer it is only to cast it in a negative and sensational light.

People always joke about Carmel being a backwater. "Newly wed, and nearly dead," etc. Of course, this is why many of us retire here, for the quiet and peace. Another thing people joke about is how poorly your sports teams do.

The same air that breeds no-growth politics seems to instill an aversion to competitiveness among your local sports administrators. The only successful coaches in the public domain are those that are not only competitive but controversial at times: John Ables, Mike Kelly, and Mike Jones. And now the powers-that-be have decided to pillory a third of your inventory. I feel as sorry for your kids as I do your developers.

Carmel soccer has long been a laughing stock in the world of California soccer — a guaranteed win for anyone with anything on the ball at all. No coaches, no players, no fields, no officials...a zero. This makes the success of this year's high school team (and the area's premier club teams) all the more astonishing.

The fact that little Carmel High defeated such powers as King City, Gonzales, and Alisal, finished second in the league, and was seeded 6th in CCS is simply astonishing.

It is equivalent to the Jamaican bobsled team winning a gold medal. The world of soccer was electrified...but they can relax. The firing of Coach Jones, and your absurd editorial supporting it, has returned Carmel to a laughing-stock.

Coach Jones is unique in soccer: he is both a nationally licensed referee instructor and a coaching instructor. He teaches adults and adolescents how to be coaches and referees. He is the only one in the country to do both. He is one of the very few instructors in either category that can teach in Spanish and English. This year he was appointed to the State Honor Roll of coaching instructors. And he works as a coach and as a referee. And he works for free.

On top of that, he has almost single-handedly created the playing environment for local soccer: building fields, supplying

Notes from an insider: clarifying the Jones affair

By SCOTT CORNER

AS THE broad brush of the Mike Jones' firing as the Carmel High School boys' varsity soccer coach sweeps across Carmel Middle School, I would like to clarify a few points raised in Connie Kirby's commentary (Pine Cone, March 27):

■ Jones was compensated for his coaching at CMS in 1995 and 1996. He didn't receive a full stipend, and neither did I. By mutual agreement, Jones and I split the one available soccer coach's stipend, and in 1996 we split it three ways to include Nick Kukuruza.

Additional coaching stipends are a long-term issue involving coordination and cooperation between the Carmel Unified School District and the teacher's association.

■ Team uniforms and equipment purchased by Jones during 1995 and 1996, which were used at CMS, also were used by Jones for youth soccer, in many instances by the same children.

■ Jones wasn't the only contributor to the purchase of the new portable soccer goals in 1996. These soccer goals were utilized by all of the local programs.

■ Fields lined by Jones in 1995 and 1996 were used by CMS, CHS, youth soccer and the YMCA. The paint was provided by the YMCA during 1996 as "compensation" for Jones' lining of the soccer fields.

■ The Mission Trails Junior Athletic League (MTJAL) operates a coeducational soccer league providing equal access in accordance with Title IX. Carmel Middle School has in the past, is currently and will continue to be in compliance with Title IX, providing equal access to all students in After School Sports, including soccer.

Kirby's daughter started on CMS's 1995 and 1996 coed soccer teams, along with other female students.

As interest has grown, CMS and other

MTJAL member schools have been and are continuing efforts to offer a girls-only soccer league at the middle school level, while preserving the coed opportunity for all students.

This effort is spearheaded by CMS, and again is an issue inter-related with individual school districts and teacher's associations of the MTJAL member schools.

Soccer in Carmel is a tight-knit community and all of the programs — YMCA, local youth soccer, CMS and CHS — are interdependent upon each other and their parent organizations for their mutual success. Carmel Middle School is very appreciative of Jones' patronage of local soccer and his time and energy expended in the pursuit of quality soccer for Carmel youth.

Scott Corner is athletic director at Carmel Middle School.

equipment, raising money, etc.

He has prodded, cajoled and begged people into allowing children to play competitive soccer in Carmel. And when his hard work finally bears fruit, he is played to be some kind of menace. I cannot remember your newspaper ever attacking any public figure in such a manner. Even child molesters and murderers have received less attention and less venom. Something is very wrong with your priorities.

I, too, feel that Coach Jones is an improper role model for Carmel youth. I think he is wrong to spend so much time, money, and heartache investing in such an ungrateful community. I hope none of them make the same mistake, though I suspect that no child leaves the Carmel High School without a cynical disregard for such altruistic behavior. I imagine Jones will continue to train coaches and referees, and continue to coach privately. His private players will all get scholarships and placements on good teams after their Carmel years and have fun while doing it. As usual, only the public school kids will miss out.

Paul Coward, Carmel Valley

Fest deserves support

Dear Editor:

I am very much in favor of the Carmel Performing Arts Festival, which is planned for October 1997.

Robin McKee, founder and producer of the Contemporary Carmel Theater Festival, has been hired as the producing artistic director of this event. I have known Robin for 23 years and have had the opportunity over the past seven years to witness her professionalism, expertise, enthusiasm, creativity and social astuteness.

It is my conviction that the cultural arts performances will be one of the utmost artistic quality. In my understanding, they will be held in theater venues, such as the Golden Bough, Mission Ranch and the Cherry Foundation for the Arts. The festival will offer the convenience of a central box office for tourists already here as well as locals.

This event can only further enhance the wonderful atmosphere already present in Carmel-by-the-Sea. This ambiance and revenue will spill over into the shops, restaurants, galleries and hotels of Carmel.

This is an exciting, soon-to-be annual event, into which much forethought, networking and planning has gone. To not be in support of this incredible festival makes absolutely no sense at all.

Lyndi Angermeier, Monterey

Guarding against overuse

Dear Editor:

It has been seven years since the Army announced it would move 13,500 soldiers away and close the Fort Ord military base.

Millions of dollars and thousands of hours have been misspent for studies and plans for conversion of the 22,000 acres.

From 1990 to 1994, Leon Panetta's select and independent Fort Ord Reuse Organization (FORG) considered scores of inappropriate or impractical proposals. In 1994, Henry Mello created a legal body, Fort Ord Reuse Authority (FORA), which was mandated to "provide for reuse and development of ways to enhance the economy and quality of life in the Monterey Bay Area" and, further, "protect and maintain the unique resources of the area."

Citizens of the Monterey Bay area should now be infuriated with FORA for contracting with professional planners who apparently did not consider they, too, were bound by the FORA mandate and last year presented a Draft Environmental Impact Report and Base Reuse Plan to support a 72,000-person new and diverse community.

The FORA executive officer and board members should have rejected the size and needs of this plan, but instead presented it as theirs in a series of public hearings where it was solidly opposed by public and government agencies as not needed, oversized, without sufficient water, infrastructure, roads, money and illegal on two counts.

FORA did not dare to bring the 72-000 person community proposal to a vote but now, after several months of studying the negative responses to the several hundred letters and transcripts from the public, FORA still does not reject the 72000 person/50-year plan but instead, offers a 37,000 person/25 year plan which they claim can be supported with an alleged existing 6,600 acre feet of water and an anticipated $117 million dollars for needed roads, but only as a mitigation that can be worked into their presently unacceptable reuse plan.

Don Jordan, FORA chairman, Seaside mayor and strong proponent of the 72,000-person community, says the new approach is "more doable, something more manageable."

The public must now determine, in advance, what is going to be done and who is going to be managed. The draft EIR and reuse plan to be voted on in May must only be the one for up to 37,000 people and with no reference to more people so as not to fall prey to the weighted vote of FORA and the pressure of developers and politicians.

Share our beauty and talent

Dear Editor:

The Monterey Peninsula is world-famous for its beauty and art, and to deny its residents and visitors an event such as the Carmel Performing Arts Festival would be a blatant oversight of the full value of our community.

If the City of Carmel is so worried about "street parties ... free-flowing liquor ... and trash," they should get the facts straight before they try to deface a cultural event which would instead enrich and enhance the city.

According to Robin McKee, the festival's director, many of the performances are already scheduled in already existing venues such as the Golden Bough Theatre, Carl Cherry Center, Forest Theatre and Devendorf Park.

The festival will offer more than world-class theatrical event: local business and restaurants would certainly benefit from the activity, and the beauty of Carmel and its surroundings can be appreciated by culture-conscious guests, patrons of the arts, and not the T-shirted, barefooted busloads of fast-food eating gawkers Carmel is trying to avoid.

There is another argument in favor of this festival: Golfers and celebrity-watchers have the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am; musicians have the Bach and Mozart festivals; artists have the galleries ... and more! I urge those who have the power to make the right decision to consider the facts and not the negative hype, and to allow this community to be what it really is; not only a place to live, but a community that can share its beauty and talent by creating and preserving its greatness.

The hazards of good intentions

Dear Editor:

At the Big Sur Multi-Agency Advisory Committee meeting on Feb. 28, the California State Coastal Conservancy publicly announced its plans for an eight-lot subdivision on the Victorine Ranch property.

The property is located just south of Mal Paso Creek on the east side of Highway 1 along the northern edge of the scenic Big Sur Coast.

With the support of the Monterey County Planning Department and the California Coastal Commission staff, the State Coastal Conservancy, in its infinite wisdom, is now proposing to save from development a two-acre parcel on the coast at Kasler Point — located immediately adjacent to the densely populated Rocky Point subdivision — in exchange for "sacrificing" to development a 100-acre pristine parcel of unspoiled natural beauty on the Victorine Ranch.

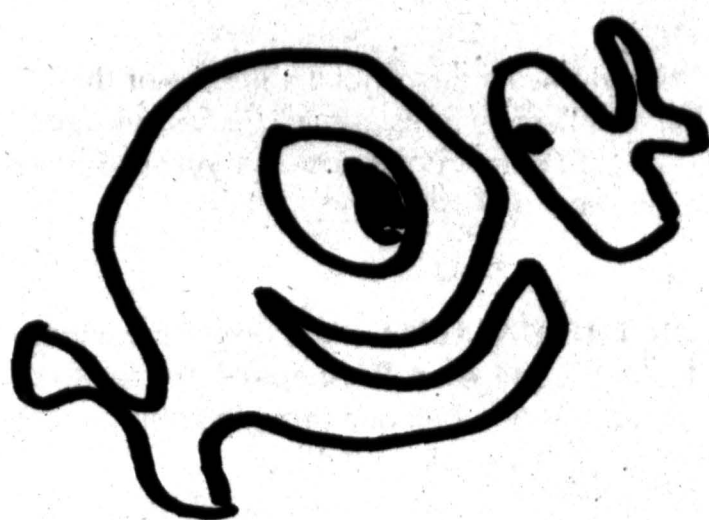

By the use of a questionable development scheme known as the transfer of development credits (TDC), the legality of which is currently being challenged in the U. S. Supreme Court, the conservancy is proposing to excessively subdivide property that could otherwise not be subdivided due to strict zoning regulations in Big Sur.

The Victorine Ranch property located in the coastal zone is designated "watershed" and "scenic conservation" with a 40-acre minimum lot size. The conservancy's proposal will, if approved, allow a compromise of the 40-acre minimum lot size by the application of the TDC program, thereby quadrupling the existing allowable density.

This will result in the creation of an eight-lot subdivision in which the average lot size will be 4.7 acres and the smallest lot proposed will be 1.4 acres.

If a precedent-setting development proposal such as this is allowed to slip through the cracks of our most protective land use legislation, as defined in the Big Sur Land Use Plan, it will open the door to permit excessive building not previously thought possible in other undeveloped areas along our coast.

It is exactly this type of proposal that has led to the degradation and over development of once pristine areas in other parts of California, like Malibu and Marin County.

Despite the good intentions in formulating a viable trade-off scheme to mitigate development in one area of the critical viewshed, the "Conservancy" intends to sacrifice an equally critical or superior coastal area by now proposing to implement inappropriate over development on the Victorine Ranch.

The "share" is the percentage of sets ACTUALLY IN USE which are tuned to that station at that time.

FOR example, KSBW's 48 share for its 11 p.m. news means that 48 percent of all sets in use at that hour are tuned to KSBW's news!

THESE FOOLISH THINGS ... Lisa Dunn of Carmel Highlands spotted this state of Washington license plate on the back of a white Lexus tooling up Carmel Hill:

"EDGE OF C."

Lisa — "Could this be the official valet car of the Highlands Inn's well-known restaurant, Pacific's Edge?"
Answer — No, Pacific's Edge does not yet send limos for diners in the state of Washington.

JUST FOR THE HALIBUT ... Former President Gerald R. Ford, 83, and Alan B. Shepard Jr., the first American in space (1961), had one thing in common here Wednesday night of last week — halibut!

Both dined at Fish Ranch restaurant in Carmel Crossroads at a banquet held by officers and major stockholders of the Edmonton Oilers hockey team.

EACH year, Oilers president Peter Pocklington and about 70 other heavies join in an outing at a different place — this year, golf at Pebble Beach and dinner at John and Karen Foley's Fish Ranch, which the Edmonton group took over for the evening.

Ford and Shepard were guests of honor. The ex-president (1974-76) topped his meal with cheesecake while Shepard, the adventurer, went for chocolate mousse with strawberries!

(You get the FULL story here, no Bland-like "briefs.")

SEVEN Secret Service agents made sure nobody mounted a sneak attack on Ford in mid-halibut, and also managed to find time to partake of the restaurant's delectable vittles, themselves, while keeping a sharp eye out for baddies!

Not all of the Secret Service's assignments are this dangerous and stressful, we're told.

plete set of mug shots and video images.)

The Carmel recruitment team was one of four such groups that had spread out over the nation to attract new members in 1994, according to the recruiters' own explanation.

The sales pitch couldn't have been more cryptic and understated. In fact, the three men and two woman focused so much on an imminent departure aboard a space vehicle that it was unclear why new members were needed.

'Share this information'

Said a male recruiter in his typical, roundabout way, "We have been given the opportunity and would like to go out and share this information to set the record straight so that they can begin the process themselves and gain complete membership."

These appeared not to be seductive con artists at work, pinching wallets and souls. The soft-focus gazes and incoherent speeches had the ring of a cult, always bordering on the idiotic.

"In our subconscious mind, we each remember clearly being on a spacecraft," said one man. "It is so clear a remembrance; it's like smelling salts."

The cult members mixed references to Jesus ("the greatest rock star ever") and other religious figures with Star Trek and pop culture icons.

A female recruiter described the group as "broke ... without funds ... we're relying only on the Creator to sustain us."

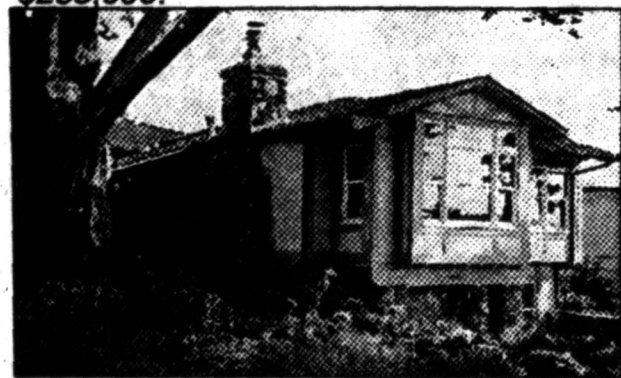

Somewhere along the line, "the Creator" must have been motivated enough to see to their Higher Source computer venture, which designed Web sites on the Internet.

None of the five members looked quite awake enough or coherent enough to run what would one day be bustling firm. There was only one reference to computers, made by a female recruiter who said, "We want to be the only typists on the keyboard of our biological computer."

Nearly three years later, 39 people would happily hit "escape" and take themselves offline.

Pioneer Carmel artist subject of multi-media installation at MPC

A GALLERY installation that explores the life and art of Jane Gallatin Powers, early California artist and co-founder of Carmel-by-the-Sea, opens at the Monterey Peninsula College art gallery next week.

Powers created the first artist's studio in Carmel, entertaining such luminaries as artist William Merritt Chase and writers George Sterling and Mary Austin. A founder of the Carmel Arts and Crafts Club, Powers played a vital role in the artistic and cultural development of Carmel, working with her husband, Frank Powers, to establish Carmel's first theater and first library.

Like Virginia Woolf, Powers believed every woman should have "a room of her own" in which to ponder and create. Say curators Erin Gaffill and Becky Dillon, "We have tried to recreate Powers' studio, not just showing her oil paintings, but also drawings, letters, tapestries, furniture and her beautiful vintage photos of Carmel — a visual feast."

This installation will focus on her influence on Carmel from 1903 to 1920, her life and art in Paris in the '20s and '30s, where she studied with Andre Lhote (a student of Cezanne's), and her final years in Rome, where she died shortly after the liberation of the city, in 1944.

A reception is slated noon to 1 p.m. Tuesday at the MPC Art Department Gallery. It will be followed by a gallery talk by the artist's great-granddaughter, Erin Gaffill, from 1 to 2 p.m.

The exhibition runs through May 30. Hours are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. Admission is free. The gallery is next to room AS 101 on campus, 980 Fremont St., Monterey.

Acoustic blues masters speak of legends and passions

By STEVE VAGNINI

BLUES MUSICIANS John Cephas and Phil Wiggins are committed to the preservation of the grassroots of the music with which they were raised. Two of the finest exponents of the Piedmont blues tradition, the acoustic duo has toured the world as ambassadors of a musical tradition that is often misunderstood.

They will appear at 8 p.m. Saturday in tandem with storyteller Jackie Torrence at the Sunset Theater in Carmel as part of the Performance Carmel series.

"Bluestory!" is an imaginative stage production of the history of the blues. As Torrence weaves tales of mythical and legendary figures of the American South, Cephas and Wiggins provide a musical backdrop performing the traditional acoustic music of Furry Lewis, Bessie Smith, Skip James, The Rev. Gary Davis and Mississippi John Hurt. One of America's best-known storytellers, with eight award-winning albums to her credit, Torrence reintroduces the giants of the blues tradition. Role models and heroes to a generation of black people in the South, these figures were ordinary folks in extraordinary circumstances; "John Henry" the steel drivin' man; Robert Johnson, the king of Delta blues; and Elizabeth Cotten, best known for her folk anthem "Freight Train," are only a few of the many figures that make up this landscape.

From his home in Bowling Green, Virginia, John Cephas spoke over the phone about the blues tradition.

Traditional influences

"A lot of people are not aware of the grassroots of the blues ... that the stuff that is being played today (contemporary music) all has some roots in the blues. We would like to bring this to light ... to educate people. In 'Bluestory!' we give a cross-section of the traditional influences."

Growing up in the Tidewater region of Virginia, Cephas was introduced to the thumb- and finger-picking music tradition of his ancestors.

"The blues at one time were not even considered to be worthy of concert stages," explained the amiable Cephas. "But the blues have come into their own. People love it when they have a chance to hear it and find out first-hand what it's all about."

Performing together since first meeting in 1976 at the Smithsonian National Folk Festival in Washington, D.C., the pair showcases Cephas' smooth and agile guitar technique and his resonant vocal style with the expressive harmonica playing and richer vocals of the younger (by 24 years) Wiggins. Having spent most of the 1980s abroad, touring Europe, Africa, Central and South America, and the Soviet Union under the auspices of the U.S. State Department, the pair recorded their first two albums, Living Country Blues and Sweet Bitter Blues for the German L & R label.

In 1987 they recorded their first domestic album, Dog Days of August, and they were recognized that year at the W.C. Handy Awards (the Blues equivalent of a Grammy), taking home the award for "Best Traditional Blues Album of the Year" as well as the prestigious award for "Blues Entertainers of the Year."

'Living treasure'

In 1989 Cephas also received a National Heritage Fellowship Award. Often called the "Living Treasure" award, this is the highest honor the United States government offers a traditional artist. Praised for their efforts and success in bringing the acoustic country blues closer to the mainstream, Cephas and Wiggins are now concerned with carrying country blues into the future.

Bringing the blues into the mainstream has not been easy. Cephas in our conversation conveyed the obvious but not always spoken truth.

"That is part of the dogmatism of the music industry itself. You know people tend not to give credit where credit is due. It's because mainly they want the glory and the monetary rewards them self."

Their latest album, Cool Down, released by Alligator Records, is a vibrant and powerful collection of six contemporary originals and six new versions of songs by such legendary artists as The Rev. Gary Davis, Blind Lemon Jefferson, Leroy Carr, Blind Boy Fuller and

Bessie Smith. Steeped in tradition, the album nevertheless is infused with modern urban imagery and the original songs speak to a current generation through roots-oriented stylings.

In "No Ice In My Bourbon," Wiggins talks about how he believes life should be lived.

Cephas explains, "Phil goes for the full unadulterated experience."

In "The Blues Will Do Your Heart Good," Wiggins also talks about how the blues can help people get through the tough times.

In the title track, "Cool Down," Wiggins makes an impassioned plea to the kids killing other kids in our urban communities. Dedicated to the cause as well as to the blues, Wiggins spends much of his time off the road opposing the drugs and violence that have plagued the community where he was raised in Washington, D.C.

The older Cephas is the founder of the Washington D.C. Blues Society and as an eloquent spokesman for the blues he has testified before Congressional committees. As a performer and as a spokesman Cephas is clear about his mission.

"If you want to get an idea about what my concern is just go into any record store and ask them where their blues section is and ask them where their traditional blues section is ... and I bet I wouldn't have to say any more ... it's still nonexistent in most stores and the ones that do have them have a very limited selection of contemporary as well as traditional music. Nine times out of 10 if you want to get anything by an older artist you have to order it from the mail."

For Cephas and Wiggins the performance, the gig, is only a small part of what they are doing. Says Cephas in conclusion, "It's emotional music ... it speaks to the body, the mind, and the soul. It needs to be heard."

Tickets for "Bluestory!" are $12.50 and $16. For further information and group purchases call 624-3996.

Take time, to not only smell the flowers, but cook with them

*Flooded with radiant dreams they are,
And we have but to stop and choose;
A dream for you, a dream for me,
A loveliness that never dies,
Beside the curve of Carmel Bay,
Beneath the curve of Carmel skies.*

— from "Poppies" by Clinton Scollard

READING THIS wonderful poem induces me into a daydream of Carmel flowers, of multicolored wild pansies, dew-dappled bright fuchsias and intoxicating vanilla-scented heliotrope. Hundreds of violet-blue lupines cascade down valley meadows while golden poppies pose an invitation to linger. Linger we may, for in spring and summer this daydream becomes a reality, when nature miraculously graces us with her floral bounty.

The Bohemian Gourmet

By Jennifer Viegas

A perfect place to indulge in such pleasures is The Carmel Garden Show. From May 8th to May 11th, garden experts and enthusiasts will convene at the Quail Lodge Resort for this annual event. Learn, among other topics, about house and garden trends from the editor of "House Beautiful" magazine, how to incorporate water and fragrance into your garden, and glean tips from Colonial Williamsburg's Floral Services manager. There even will be a seminar on "The Garden as Art: Gardening Philosophies of the Impressionists: Cezanne, Renoir, Monet, Van Gogh."

When I think of flowers and art, Carmel's own Lillian Braico first comes to mind.

"My studio is so jammed with flowers, I can hardly breathe," she exclaims. Her thoughtful, vibrantly colored paintings of flowers evoke all of nature's vivid beauty. Some of her most recent work is of lilies, ranunculas, poppies and "lovely pale peach French tulips."

"I often make my own garden in my mind," she says. It is fitting that to celebrate a solo showing of her art at Tokyo's Shikigaro Galleries and the recent release of a poster depicting her renowned "Field of Ranunculas," she will travel to Carlsbad.

"There, publicity shots will be taken of me standing amongst acres of ranunculas. I'm really looking forward to it," Braico enthuses.

Not so obvious marriage

While flowers and art seem suitably matched, flowers and cooking form a not quite so obvious marriage. Some of my friends still feel a bit barbaric consuming them, and others view edible flowers as just yet another passing gourmet fancy. Actually the use of flowers in cooking is an ancient practice. Native Central and South American Indians ate flower roots. Europeans in medieval times popularized candied violets and other elegant desserts, such as rose petal pie and orange flower ice.

Many flowers are edible, given that they are free of pesticides and are accurately harvested. Edible varieties include anise hyssop, arugula, borage, chive, chrysanthemum, cottage pink, daisy, daylily (Hemerocallis), dill, fennel, garlic chives, geranium (Scented, Pelargonium), gladiolus (Gladiolus species), hollyhock, honeysuckle, johnny jump-up, lavender, marigold, mustard, nasturtium, pansy, peony (Paeonic), petunia, poppy (Papaver), primrose, rose (Rosa), safflower, squash (Cucurbita), tulip (Tulipa), viola and violets.

Each flower has its own distinct flavor. Nasturtium, for example, has a strong horseradish-like bite, whereas chamomile is slightly sweet with a hint of lemon. Like a fine wine, flowers often possess many complex flavors at once, so take some time, not only to smell the flowers, but to experiment with them in your kitchen.

Flower Garden Spinach Salad

With its vibrant colors, this salad is like an edible floral bouquet.

2 Tbsp. raspberry vinegar
1/4 cup walnut oil
1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
Pinch of sugar
4 cups fresh spinach leaves
1-1/2 cups fresh raspberries
1 cup walnuts, toasted
1 cup edible flowers, such as viola, scented geranium and nasturtium

Whisk first four ingredients together in a salad bowl. Add spinach leaves and toss to coat with dressing. Add raspberries and walnuts. Toss again, gently. Arrange flowers over the top of each serving.

Yields four to six portions.

Carmelite Delight

Any jelly may be used for this elegant candy, a version of Turkish Delight, but I prefer it with rose jelly. Try making your own by simmering rose petals in water, sugar and a bit of lemon juice.

1 cup sugar
1/2 cup water
Zest from 1 lemon
1/4 cup unflavored gelatin powder
1/4 cup warm water
Juice from 1 lemon
1/4 cup rose, or other flavored, jelly
1/4 cup powdered sugar
2 Tbsp. cornstarch

In a nonreactive pan over medium-high heat, bring sugar, one-half cup water and lemon zest to a boil. Dissolve gelatin in one-quarter cup of warm water and add to boiling sugar liquid. Reduce heat to a low simmer, cover, and cook for 15 minutes.

Remove from heat and stir in lemon juice and jelly. Dip an eight-inch square pan into cold water. Shake off excess water. Pour mixture into wetted pan. Cover and chill until set in the refrigerator. Sift powdered sugar and cornstarch together onto a plate. Cut firmed candy into squares. Roll squares in powdered sugar and cornstarch until thoroughly coated.

Makes about two dozen candies.

This Australian sojourn resembled a 'Tour de Farce'

IT'S NO SECRET that I adore Australia. In fact, I'm writing another book — this one about the origins and variety of a much underrated cuisine. Its pages are filled with merry anecdotes about the country and its extraordinary citizens. There's not a sour grape to be found in its contents.

Also, my longtime readers and listeners, are aware that "reviews" rather than "critiques" are my style. Once in a while however, a consumer experience is so egregious it's impossible to let it slide. My friends also know that rather than making unpleasant or unprofessional treatment public, or chatting it up among friends, I go directly to the source, i.e. owner, chef, manager, whomever is in a position of accepting constructive criticism and acting upon it.

In the consumer alert I'm about to share with you, both owner and several managers were contacted and their responses were either non-existent or totally unacceptable — in fact they might be classified under "Travel Science Fiction." Hence this ombudsman column.

"No worries, Mate." Don't you believe it! There's plenty to worry about on certain packaged tours to Australia, "up market" or no! Our "Walkabout" tour, as co-advised by ATS Pacific and Wagon Lits Cook, had memorable moments but it also had many totally inexcusable and avoidable "segments from hell!"

The impressive color catalog, represented the tour as having "superior" accommodations, and being "fully escorted." To be fair, in small print at the beginning of the brochure, it did flag a warning which stated that if at least 15 people did not sign up, the tour would be "unescorted." For the more than $12,000 tab, paid 90 days in advance, you get to haul your own luggage out of the room, onto the bus, into the terminal, wait in the "ticketing" line, toss your own luggage onto the scale and off all of the airport carousels, and ... would you believe it (and I quote from the ATS representative): "ATS will not charge you any additional fees for not being escorted."

Probably the most aggravating moments were due to the ATS representatives' "it's not our fault" attitudes. It "wasn't the fault" of the polite ATS man who delivered our documents to us in the third-rate Premier Menzies Hotel. (We had been told we were to be luxuriously ensconced in the Darling Harbor Novotel).

Air shaft views

I complained that all of our rooms (there were nine of us) were minuscule and with smashing views of a brick air shaft, and that that was not what had been represented. He shrugged and agreed that the rooms promised in the brochure were not available. Checking with the hotel manager I was told that the reservations had been made "run of the hotel," which to the initiated, in hotelese means, whatever undesirable, as yet unsold rooms might be available.

Adelaide, which is one of my favorite cities, was given short shrift! One treat was The Red Ochre Grill (about which I wrote several weeks ago), young Andrew Fielke's salute to Australian Bush cuisine. Chef Cheong Liew's Grange Restaurant was another delight. Both those reservations were made thanks to the South Australia Tourist Commission's angel-on-the-spot, Karyn Guy. Well done and thank you, Karyn.

It wasn't ATS's fault that a promised Adelaide City Tour, to which we all looked forward, turned out to be a whirl up the surrounding hills to what has to be the biggest tourist trap in Australia, Hahndorf. We never did get to tour Adelaide!

Not even ATS could spoil Ayers Rock. It is spectacular. To be fair, the Hotel Desert Gardens was pleasant and well-appointed. The tour guides from a local company, AKT, were terrific and both the sacred Rock itself and the nearby Olgas are visions never to be forgotten.

Day 12, enter again the poor scheduling of ATS. Up at 5 a.m., no breakfast, to see sunrise over the Rock, we are forced to vacate our rooms before we leave (check out time is 10 a.m. ... our return wasn't scheduled till 10:30). We sat for three hours in a jammed hotel lobby to wait for transport by bus to Alice Springs. There were early flights (booked by other more savvy tour operators apparently) we could have taken. The five-hour bus ride was grueling with two tacky 15 minute stops for amenities. My complaint to ATS was answered with "...some clients want to experience the vastness of the Outback, and what better way than by traversing it in a motor coach." (How about an Ansett window seat or a video-tape?)

Sour milk

Alice Springs hotel, the Territory Inn, was a horror! Rooms like a truck stop billet (or warm bed motel!). Arriving, we were handed a room key and a small container of milk after we "fully" registered. Dirty blankets, filthy carpets, two small bath towels, one hand towel and one washcloth, and one small hand soap, PER COUPLE. One of our group was given a room with a broken door lock. She was unable to be given another room, so she piled a chair and table in front of her door. The mini-fridge was so noisy we had to turn it off to sleep and the milk of course, soured. The air conditioner in our room (#209) leaked all night, leaving a huge puddle on the floor. The hotel denied all this with the Sydney representative, but as a good reporter, I took photos!

Received a call at 7 a.m. from the ATS rep, Amanda Jarman, in Sydney (She knew that we had been up the day before at 5 a.m. for the Ayers Rock experience) to see "how we were going?" I recited a brief litany of our group's discontent, and she said, "Well, write a letter when you get back!"

Precious jewel

The brightest spot of the trip was the sheer delight of the Coral Princess Cruise of the Great Barrier Reef. The beauty of the reef was presented to each of us like the precious jewel it is by the captain and crew. I've written thanks to all of them. If you have a chance, don't miss it.

Of course, all good things come to an end and Townsville was the end. Again, trapped by our lack of knowledge and the blatant misrepresentation of ATS. (We return to the word "superior" in their brochure. Maybe the copywriter at ATS doesn't own a dictionary!) I asked at the hotel desk what the daily rates were and they gave me a brochure with the special rate of $58 per night. Superior, my Aunt Fanny!

High points of the tour: Ansett's flights were superb — on time and well-served by smiling, efficient personnel. On the last flight from Townsville to Sydney there was a delay, but we were kept informed, served water and juice, and the claustrophobes aboard were allowed to leave the plane until the mechanical problem was corrected ... well and graciously handled. Another highlight of the trip was the bus tour guides. All were well informed and blessed with delightful senses of humor. They sweetened and seasoned many a long hour on buses, and should be

'Molly Sweeney' intellectually soars at Golden Bough

By JAMES P. KINNEY

THAT THE HUMAN MIND and spirit have the capacity to tour distant galaxies seems to me one of the clearest, most exhilarating messages sent us by the great artists and mystics.

The works of Raphael and Michelangelo, Shakespeare and Dante, Mozart and Beethoven, Teresa of Avila and John of the Cross have the ability to lift us up to touch the stars because most are born with the intelligence and sensitivity to do so. That many never come to realize this, wounded early on or hijacked by forces determined to keep them in distracted ignorance, is one of the great tragedies of the human condition.

Hill's lights, in fact, approach being a fourth presence, creating strongly mood and intent, a leitmotif, if you will, of recurring patterns of intent and meaning.

Such is the core theme of "Molly Sweeney," an intellectually soaring new drama by Irish playwright Brian Friel currently staged at Pacific Repertory's Golden Bough Theatre in Carmel.

And, as with much good theater experienced for the first time, Friel's play is also a challenge, a contradiction, a danger to traditional ways of thinking. Like the hero of the short novel, "Flowers for Algernon," Molly Sweeney is offered the chance to enhance her perception of the world, hereby having restored to her the sense of sight lost in the first year of life. But, as with Charley, the short novel's simply-minded hero offered high intelligence by medical means, known risk here is also involved.

If eccentric is too strong a word to describe Friel's play, untraditional is not. Three performers, two men and a woman, almost always physically on stage together, address the audience directly in separate, finely crafted monologues. There is no eye contact between the three, no recognition of their physical proximity. Although they discuss each other's actions in great detail and eloquence, each is isolated in a personal pool of light and thought and feeling.

"Is this any way to run a play?" a little voice within me mumbled irritably five or 10 minutes into the action. Here is Molly (Julie Hughett), 40ish, an attractive, composed blind woman, sitting quietly at center stage, describing her early life in a small, drab Irish town, talking on about troubled parents, friends, early adventures and the imaginative efforts of a caring husband to help her cope in a world she can barely see.

Eventually lights go down on Molly and up on husband Frank (Michael Jacobs) at left stage, seated as well,

Rare Finds on the Peninsula

H.D. Newman, Inc., Construction

Integrity, longevity and quality are the words that come to mind in reference to an established Carmel business, H.D. Newman, Inc., Construction. The company was founded 25 years ago by Diz Newman, who today works in cooperation with his son, Randy.

"I've worked with many of my subcontractors for more than 15 years," Randy explains. "We have a good rapport."

This company was responsible for many local construction and remodeling projects, including building Toots Lagoon in Carmel and remodeling the Payless Drug structure in Carmel Rancho.

"I work closely with my employees and subcontractors in all phases of the job," Randy says. "Safety and quality are paramount."

Rely on H.D. Newman Construction for both residential and commercial projects of all types. To learn more, call 624-6791.

Rabbit Corner

Tucked in the Courtyard of the Tuck Box there is a design cottage with creations as wonderful as their magical setting. Rabbit Corner is the creation of Sally Jan Smith and her partner, Jane Saunders.

For three years, Smith has sold her original designs across the United States. Now, Carmel is home to the first signature Rabbit Corner shop.

The original designs incorporate new and vintage textiles with antique linens, laces, embroideries and buttons. The designs for ladies and little girls range from casual to formal, including wedding ensembles. Unique jewelry and accessories can also be found to complement the romantic tea dresses, separates and even nightwear.

The Rabbit Corner is, itself, a one-of-a-kind gem, with a charming English garden in the rear and heaps of whimsy and style. Flower pots sprout topiary forms that are loaded with fanciful and fun frocks and such.

To experience more, telephone 624-6914.

Village de Provence

Village de Provence

The collections at Village de Provence in the Crossroads can contribute a touch of sunny southern France to your home. Furniture is imported directly from Provence, and includes farm tables, chairs and china hutches.

A Provençal theme can also be carried through with the help of Valdrome fabrics and table linens. This French company has produced yardage in washable cotton for 180 years. Buy it by the bolt or in the form of tablecloths of all sizes.

Village de Provence also brims with one-of-a-kind, heirloom quality china, glassware and silverware. Indeed, the sunny colors of the South of France are evident in this shop, located at 116 Crossroads Blvd., Carmel.

It's worth a visit to inspect the hand-blown glassware by Biot. Delight guests with delicious imported lavender honey, champagne vinegar and olive oil. Call 626-9425.

Robertson's Antiques

Robertson's Antiques showcases fine furniture, dishes, glassware and silver dating from the 18th century up to the first quarter of the 20th.

Visitors will also see unique lighting fixtures dating from the early 1900s, plus china, glassware and Oriental antiques.

This Carmel shop is hard to miss with its four large display windows on Seventh Avenue and two entrances, one on Seventh and one on Dolores.

Owner Nick Robertson is always interested in purchasing fine quality antiques and encourages locals to contact him if they have items to sell.

"I'm looking more for decorative accessories," he says. "I buy outright which eliminates, for many people, the hassles of consignment or auction. People know what they'll get up-front rather than putting items on consignment and waiting for them to sell." Call 624-7517.

A Feature of THE CARMEL PINE CONE

Restaurant

Bon Appetit!

Feature of the Week:

Michael's

Michael's at the Barnyard continues the award-winning traditions of its owner, Bradley Jones. At Michael's, Jones, a graduate of the prestigious Culinary Institute of America, gives full play to his polished talents. During his tenure as Chef de Cuisine at Club XIX, it was voted "One of the Top 25 Restaurants in the Country." Bradley is also the owner of Bradley's Harbor-Front Restaurant in Monterey, which was voted "Best New Restaurant in Monterey County" following its 1993 opening.

Michael's serves both lunch and dinner, and Sunday brunch specials. Jones says that the menu changes, "on my whim," and is influenced by the best of fresh seasonal ingredients.

Diners seem to gravitate toward the two fireplaces: one is in the dining room and another outdoors on the patio adjacent the full bar. There is also a semi-private banquet room.

Michael's at the Barnyard has much to commend on its menu. There are delicious pastas, grilled meats, vegetables and seafood. Enjoy house-made ravioli with innovative fillings, a starter of avocado pancakes with salsa fresca, or perhaps roasted duckling with huckleberry jus.

As the menu is extensive and changing, the only way to do justice to Michael's at the Barnyard is to experience a meal in person. Lunch is served 11:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily. Dinner service begins at 4.

Call 622-5200.

COLLARS AND TAGS ARE YOU PET'S TICKET HOME!

Last year, The SPCA of Monterey County took in more than 5,000 stray animals, pets brought to us either by concerned people or animal control officers. What is even more astounding than the number of stray animals is that only 870 were reclaimed by owners!

Sadly, many of these animals are victims of irresponsible pet owners, who dump their pets when they are no longer wanted or simply refuse to come looking when the animal is missing. But The SPCA believes many pets belong to people who simply don't realize the importance of ID and when to come looking if your pet is missing!

All of us at The SPCA can't stress enough the importance of putting a collar and tag on your pet, a dog or a cat, or better yet, to microchip your pet and give it permanent ID. ID is your pet's ticket home! And if your pet is brought to a shelter, having ID can sometimes make a life or death difference. This is a common scenario: a cat strays and is picked up by animal control officers. It is held by The SPCA for a mandatory 72 hours, then put up for adoption or unfortunately, euthanized because there is no space for it. If this cat's owners don't begin looking for it for several days, thinking it will wander home, they leave their pet to an uncertain fate.

Please give your pets a sure ticket home, give them ID!

REAL ESTATE REPRESENTS MEGABUCKS AND RISKS

HOW MUCH the heck is $1 trillion? A few giant real estate-related firms seem to know as they throw around this figure to impress people that they are the firm to do business with.

California Trends

By Bradley Inman

Secondary mortgage firm Fannie Mae uses the $1 trillion figure to describe its commitment to affordable housing. In this, $1 trillion is a way to let its lending partners know that it is the firm to do business with, and it is also to impress members of Congress that the government-chartered but private firm is committed to helping the disadvantaged.

In both cases, these numbers represent the chest beating and hubris that always seems to infect the real estate industry in good times. With home sales at record levels and the economy strong, real estate experience is a booming business again with firms like Fannie Mae and Century 21 turning in record earnings.

The numbers are also a reflection on how big and encumbered the American real estate experience has gotten again.

Last year, Americans purchased a record number of homes at record dollar volume and took on a record amount of debt to do so.

With 4.08 million resale homes sold at an average price of $118,200, the total volume of housing purchases was a whopping $482 billion.

Moreover, this equates to an estimated $400 billion in new debt for families who bought homes, a staggering sum that often when times are good.

Take the debt load. Not only is the total amount of home purchases bigger, but consumer debt-to-equity ratios are higher must be worked down for 30 long years.

...these numbers represent the chest beating and hubris that always seems to infect the real estate industry in good times. With home sales at record levels and the economy strong, real estate experience is a booming business again with firms like Fannie Mae and Century 21 turning in record earnings.

This is not an argument against the benefits of home ownership, which give families freedom from renting as well as a way to earn equity, avoid income taxes and fix their monthly house payments at a given level for years to come.

Consequences often ignored

But a booming real estate market can have consequences that are often ignored because more home buyers are turning to low down payment mortgages.

That means consumers have less invested in their property and have more of an incentive to walk away from their investment when the job market turns and they cannot make their mortgage payments. This could lead to more foreclosures and problems in the financial markets.

For example, even though it was reported that home sales were at record levels last year, it was also disclosed that foreclosures from the earlier California recession were at record levels. A boom in the market is often quick and exuberant but the effects of a downturn are long and enduring.

Also, the amount of money flowing into the mortgage market has created new loans that come with greater risk to the lender and a higher cost to the consumer.

Having exhausted the supply of ready home buyers with grade "A" credit, lenders are aggressively competing for the "B" and "C" lending market. These are loans for people who have credit dings or problems in their employment histories that don't qualify them for the best loans. These loans come at a higher rate and sometimes are for a shorter term.

They are also loans that can go bad quickly.

As always, this burgeoning debt load is predicated on a thriving economy and home price inflation to pay for the home buying transaction costs.

When that turns, we are in for problems. At least that is how it has worked during every other real estate bust over the last 30 years.

Absent a voice, supporters of low-cost housing score victory nonetheless

EARLIER THIS year, city officials, housing advocates and citizens gathered in Irvine to celebrate the grand opening of the affordable Santa Alicia garden-apartment project in this affluent Southern California community.

In the red-hot Orange County housing market, affordable housing is a welcome sight, as renters scramble for fewer and fewer vacant apartments and home buyers race against home price inflation.

The project also is a tribute to leadership, particularly that of Donald Turner, the former president of the non-profit BRIDGE Housing Corp., which built the 84-unit project. Turner died one year ago on April 3 in the airplane crash that also killed U.S. Secretary of Commerce Ron Brown.

There was a time when the Orange County project didn't represent joy and accomplishment. Instead, when the Irvine City Council was approving it two years ago, it stood for conflict, community disagreement and shrill positions about affordable housing.

Like so many low-cost housing developments, the people who didn't want the apartments overwhelmed supporters. Generally in communities such as Irvine, open space, endangered species and traffic jams are more popular causes than homes for low-paid workers.

Against these odds, at one point BRIDGE held out the card of suing the city over its resistance to the project. California's anti-NIMBY law prevents cities from arbitrarily turning down an affordable housing project, and BRIDGE claimed a decision to reject the project would violate those requirements.

The threat came to a boiling point at a 1995 city council hearing held to decide the project's fate.

Representing BRIDGE, Turner faced several hostile council members who used the threatened lawsuit to characterize the non-profit builder as a bully developer.

At one point in the hearing, Turner was confronted by council member Christina Shea, now mayor of Irvine. She challenged Turner to promise not to sue, suggesting members of the council could be held personally liable.

Knowing that the lawsuit may have been the only angle BRIDGE had to guarantee approval, Turner walked delicately around the issue, but clearly left the litigation threat on the table. He made a positive case for the project, its future tenants and its contribution to the community. But he wouldn't retreat from the legal weapon in his appeal that in the end helped to persuade the most persistent foes.

This was the work of a creative, courageous and agile housing advocate who knew when to be a gentleman, when to be a persuader and when to plow ahead like a tank. He also could be charismatic and coy, but eyeball-to-eyeball direct when necessary. And he could finesse like a master bridge player.

That wasn't the first time that housing litigation was an issue in Orange County involving Turner. In the late 1970s he used his position as then California Gov. Jerry Brown's housing chief to sue Orange County for ignoring its obligation to build affordable houses. Again, the suit was controversial, but Turner made his point.

As the California housing market heats up, the state once again faces a quandary with too few leaders who will stand up to the NIMBYs, to the stubborn government officials and to the politically correct crowd which uses environmental issues to shield itself from the poor.

BRIDGE Housing is in very able hands with long-time housing advocate Carol Galante at the helm, but Turner's swath cut wider than the work of this one non-profit group.

He represented affordable housing in city halls, the state legislature and on congressional committees. He sat on citizen committees on affordable housing, spoke at conferences and participated in workshops.

Turner was a tireless champion who could take the humdrum issue of housing and make it into a popular cause that people could understand and even feel passionate about.

As the California housing market gets wicked again, the state needs more people who can stand up to it as Turner did.

THE STARS SHINE BIG AND BRIGHT ON OSCAR NIGHT

THE THEME of the celebration was "Step into the Spotlight!" Well, my darlings, at the Monterey County Film Commission party in Pebble Beach, they certainly did.

We gathered at The Beach and Tennis Club on Oscar night, March 24, for a black-tie buffet dinner. We witnessed the bestowing of honors on two local personalities and observed the 69th Annual Academy Awards telecast.

"Star-struck" was our collective reaction when tiny Master of Ceremonies Billy Crystal came charging through that huge curtain in what was the most stupendous beginning of an Academy Awards ever.

On the local front, a plaque and chocolate "Oscar" went to Mark Verbonich, vice president of community affairs at The Pebble Beach Co., for his outstanding support of the nonprofit Film Commission's efforts to boost film industry involvement in Monterey County.

The same award went to Glen McGowan, chief ranger at Point Lobos State Reserve, who was recognized as the on-location professional of the year. He has supervised and coordinated film shoots at area state parks for years.

Friends and guests then turned their attention to the large telecast screen to watch Hollywood's film industry award the makers of "The English Patient" nine Academy Awards, including one for Best Picture. When Geoffrey Rush won the Oscar for Best Actor, it was obvious that his fellow nominees were very happy for him. The valiance shown by all of the competitors made it the finest Academy Awards celebration I have ever witnessed.

Back at home, many film commission members were in attendance. Among those were former Monterey County Supervisor Sam Karas and his wife, Edie (a fine actress in her own right), Ken Allen, Joseph Anastasia, Lee Caplin, Terri DeBono, Barbara Livingston, Vicki Morrison, Lei Fernandez, Alan Richmond (he doubled as Master of Ceremonies), Teresa Del Piero, Cliff Bagwell, Sandy Sidener and Phyllis Decker, to name a few.

In addition to the dinner, guests participated in bidding on a silent auction of numerous items, including those donated by Hollywood celebrities Jack Lemmon and Don Johnson.

Proceeds from the auction benefited the commission, a non-profit organization dedicated to fostering the devel-

■ Carmel Public Library Foundation salutes donors

The financial clout of the Carmel Public Library Foundation was much in evidence Sunday, March 23. In two afternoon presentations, guests learned of substantial bequests made by donors who fervently support this organization.

Flowers for Giorgio Tegani of Il Fornaio Cucina Italiana as Don Langendorf looks on. Il Fornaio was one of five donors pledging $10,000 toward the Maybeck Plaque Program.

Gifts of $10,000 or more, a bequest of $160,000 from the late Nello E. Kearney, a pledge of $10,000 toward the Endowment Fund and announcement of a Children's Reading Endowment Program with powerful citizens on its committee — Jean and Susan Draper, Lacy Williams Buck, Bunny Stevens and others — were impressively relayed by Don Langendorf, foundation president.

Langendorf made us all laugh when he remarked, "For a million dollar donation, you can name this library."

Both presentations took place in the Harrison Memorial Library Park Branch.

Upon receiving a $90,000 check from John Hicks, Cecil Wahle, president of the Harrison Memorial Library Board of Trustees, elatedly thanked everyone. The $90,000 represented 120 percent of the $75,000 annual campaign goal, and was donated by 677 people. All campaign donations are given to the library to meet immediate needs.

Gus Arriola, and his wife Francis, were thanked for their work as honorary chairs of the annual campaign, and for the numerous cartoons and drawings Gus drew for the library. Afterwards Gus (gosh, I love that gent) came over and said, "Dodie, I want the record set straight. Last year, you reported that I was 80 years old. I was not. I was 79 and will be 80 this year."

OK, darling Gus, the record is straight! But, you really look only 60.

What an incredible foundation is in place for our library! For more information about this group, call 624-2811.

■ Soroptimist International of Carmel Bay announces awards

It was an inspiring luncheon and afternoon we enjoyed Wednesday, March 26 at Rancho Cañada, where the Soroptimist International of Carmel Bay, announced its annual awards.

First, let me tell you who was there: Patricia Smith Ramsey, Frank Hespe, Sandy Baldinger, Lloyd Morain, Jerry Prothro, Artie Early, Morley Brown, Ron Weitzman, Amy Funt, Lynn Traynor, Jean Grace, Elinor Laiolo, Jean Snow, and Mayors Ken White of Carmel and Dan Albert of Monterey. Time and space do not allow me to tell you who else was present, but there were many more there. They all came to praise and honor the five recipients of the awards.

After President Pam Schofield and Shari Hastey welcomed everyone and luncheon was served, Soroptimist Louise Burbank introduced Erin Miller, a senior at Robert Louis Stevenson School. Out of the 38 students who applied, Miller was chosen for the Young Citizenship Award. She was lauded by people in the community for her leadership abilities and her positive attitude. The bright youngster engages in 14 sports and works in service programs. She received $1,500, which will help her at Stanford next fall.

Debra McAlahney, a student at Hartnell College, received $1,500 as winner of the Training Awards Program, which is given for education needs. McAlahney, a recovering addict, held the audience spellbound describing her efforts in helping herself and others, especially women in prison. The award was presented by Mary Ann Jacka.

Three women of distinction were honored next. When Elaine Berman's name came up, everyone rose and applauded her roundly because Berman, who handles the Barnet Segal Trust, has touched the lives of most of the people who were in the room by contributing more than $5 million from the proceeds of the trust to dozens of the charities and organizations they represent.

Jean Darragh lovingly introduced Berman, the mother of five children, as a delightful, one-of-a-kind lady.

"She'll discuss any subject with you and give you her opinion immediately, which is unchangeable — a most remarkable woman," said Darragh. Berman's husband, Dr. Herbert Berman, was delighted at Elaine's receiving an award.

School Administrator Carol Lenters was introduced by Soroptimist Shari Hastey as being a woman of distinction who takes part in the lives of all children she encounters. After receiving her award, several students came up and gave her a crown of flowers and many hugs and kisses.

Laiolo introduced volunteer fire fighter Penny Vieregge, who has lived 27 years in Big Sur, and is a tour de force as an emergency medical technician on ambulances for the Monterey County Sheriff's Rescue team. Many people who have been saved by Vieregge have never met her. Vieregge made roadside plaques in Big Sur, denoting where people live so that in a fire or other emergency, they can be rescued.

The Soroptimist International of Carmel Bay is part of the world's largest service organizations for executive and professional women, and contributes most of its money to individual community needs. Call 372-8026 for more information.

Community Partnership for Youth members from Manzanita School enjoyed lunch with Soroptimist Sandy Baldinger. Among those attending were: (back row) Roshawnda Lute, Jessica Stephens, Alicia Jones, Dixie Dixon, Myleka Garnett, Baldinger, Tanya Malone; (front row) Jeanne Loggins, Joycelyn Stephens, Jacquelyn Fleming and Christina Frazier.

praised for five-star patience.

As a travel writer, traveling on my own dollar, the point of this report is not to knock Australia, but to wake up you tour operators and the agencies which police and govern them. There's an Olympics coming up, millions of dollars are being spent on prospective tourism.

Public relations are hardly served by a so-called "professional" telling the traveler to "write a letter." At no time did anyone apologize, try to mollify, speak of refunding of any monies, or upgrading of accommodations at the next stop, or any mitigating of a most unpleasant experience.

Australia is a wondrous land, filled with unparalleled natural beauty and sensational "mates." Just caution your travel agent to stay away from ATS tours!

but not for long. This energetic, high-strung man is wired, full of wild schemes and shaky scenarios to rescue the world, improve his financial well-being and, in the process, help a beloved wife become a full participant in daily living. He demands she tell him what flower she holds by its taste, its smell, its feel. And so Molly develops the other senses to compensate for sightlessness.

Finally, the third character, seated in darkness until now, is bathed in light. Mr. Rice (John Rousseau), a famous but flawed eye surgeon, after first waving his credentials at us, begins to unfold a plan to restore Molly's sight with a complex, but familiar operation.

The acting of all three veteran performers is of very high quality, all of it greatly enhanced by Ed Hills' light design. The light around Mr. Rice is shaped in rigid rectangles, emphasizing the actions of a clinically linear mind. A circular pool of light edged with flowers shapes Molly's rich flights of poetic fancy. A color wash of irregular splotches suggests Frank's mosaic mind, that like an inner, frisky billy goat, rambles and skips and gracefully leaps wherever it chooses.

Hill's lights, in fact, approach being a fourth presence, creating strongly mood and intent, a leitmotif, if you will, of recurring patterns of intent and meaning.

In a wonderful display of sensitive, generous, collaborative performing, the three embrace the soaring, powerful, often wry, often humorous language. What began as a linguistic banquet for the mind becomes a seductive, satisfying tribute to the human spirit, a daring drama at the same time celebrating growth and an inherent potential for danger.

Yet each achieves a stunning uniqueness as well. Rousseau's ponderous thought and physicality, his tested worldliness fail to hide a devastating insecurity. Jacobs' satchel of ticks and tricks becomes familiar, but the stops and starts of a spinning mind too quick for its voice is both entertaining and endearing. And Hughett's mastery of the title character's strengths and vulnerabilities is masterful.

Dan Gotch's direction is meticulous, perceptive. Stunning set design is by Mark Hanuik. Costumes by Rhonda Griffith. Technical direction by John Rousseau.

What I experienced two Saturdays ago in Carmel's Golden Bough Theatre was a satisfying, glowing production of the latest play of a daring playwright recognized around the world sitting comfortably on the cutting edge of contemporary drama. For that reason I recommend Pac Rep's "Molly Sweeney" without reservation.

WHEN YOU BUY A HOUSE "AS IS"

You have found a "fixer-upper" at a great price and in a great location that could be perfect for your family! The seller is offering it in "as is" condition and is not willing to make any repairs before the closing. Such sales can create terrific opportunities if you have all of the information that you need to make an informed decision about the purchase.

How much is "a little" work? A structural inspector can help you determine exactly what you are getting into. Make sure you and the sellers have a clear understanding about the effective date of the "as is" agreement, including who pays to correct any significant problems that may occur between the acceptance of the contract and the closing? What types of mortgage funds are available? Some
